and Democracy

MAIN FINDINGS

- The current analysis was focused on understanding the trends in the online reflection of NATO, a key geopolitical actor, in the Romanian online environment, throughout 2022, the year when the Russian invasion of Ukraine took place, starting an on-going war.
- Although not a directly involved actor, NATO was indirectly part of the conversation regarding the war, both before the actual conflict started (during the amplification of tensions between Russia and Ukraine) and after the invasion.
- Our analysis reveals that there were over 213.000 mentions of NATO on the analyzed online channels over the 10 months analyzed, corresponding to a number of 8432 unique authors.
- A month-by-month analysis reveals that the month with the highest volume of mentions was March 2022, when over 35.000 mentions were registered.
- The highest number of mentions were hosted by news articles, followed by Twitter, blogs and forums.

MAIN FINDINGS

- The top 3 most frequent trending phrases appearing in the online texts mentioning NATO that were included in this research were “razboiul din Ucraina” (the Ukraine war), “summitul Nato” (the NATO summit), “arme nucleare” (nuclear weapons). This reflects the focus of the debate towards the end of the analyzed period (September – October).
- Ukraine, Russia, Romania and the US are the most frequent terms appearing in the analyzed online texts. Regarding leaders’ names, the most frequent is “Vladimir” (Putin), followed by “Zelenski”. “Biden”, “Iohannis” and “Stoltenberg” also appear.
- The main topic clusters that dominate the discussion are: Ukraine & Russia; Romania & the Eastern flank; Romania & the EU; Biden on Ukraine; NATO summit; Turkey.

OBJECTIVE & METHODOLOGICAL APPROACH

Objective

- The main focus was assessing the size of the online debate around NATO, looking at its main drivers – authors, as well as topics, and analyzing its evolution throughout the analyzed period, to understand key moments.
- The trends and evolutions related to both quantity/frequency and quality/semantic associations etc have the potential to offer particular insights not only related to the image of the analyzed organization, but also regarding the context surrounding the Ukraine war.

Methodological approach

- In order to collect and analyze data, a Boolean search query was built, reflecting all variations of the organization's name usually employed in public discussions in Romania.
- This query was applied in Brandwatch*, a social media monitoring and analysis tool that tracks online conversations.
- The analyzed period was Jan 1 – Oct 25, 2022.
- Brandwatch tracks mentions on news websites, blogs, forums, Twitter and Tumblr. Thus, this report only reflects insights related to these online channels.
- The initial results were repeatedly tailored by the researcher in order to better suit the specific research needs, excluding irrelevant data (both manually and using the various filters that the platform offers).
  - *Access to Brandwatch was possible thanks to the SEE Suite at the Grady College of Journalism and Mass Communication, University of Georgia.

TOPICS

Focus on content

Top topics

- Looking at the topics most associated with the debate regarding NATO, it is noticeable that the key words that appear most frequently are names of countries - first-placed are the ones chiefly associated with the war (Ukraine and Russia), followed by Romania and the US.
- Terms such as "declared" are also appearing frequently, signifying the importance awarded to quotes (presumably by officials involved and/or commenting about war evolutions). Other prominent terms are "war", "time", "against", "military", "security".
- Looking at leader names, the most frequent is "Vladimir" (Putin), followed by "Zelenski". "Biden", "Iohannis" and "Stoltenberg" also appear.
- The tagcloud illustration of the main topics can be visualized on the following page.

Topic wheel

- The topic visualization on the right reflects the way the main topic associated with the research subject, underlined in the inner circle of the wheel, relate to secondary themes, on the outside circle.
- It is noticeable that NATO's enlargement occupied a significant portion of the debate on the analyzed channels.

Topic clusters

- A different way of visualizing topics and subtopics underlines 6 different areas of the debate.
- We manually underlined and named the different clusters signifying the main areas of the debate. On the following page, the subtopics can be viewed more clearly.
